Dyess civilians mark 40-years of service

By Airman 1st Class James Kang
Dyess Public Affairs

Two Dyess civilians recently received the 40-year federal service pin for their combined time in military and civil service.

James Drury, 7th Operations Support Squadron project officer, and Elijah Freeman, 7th Bomb Wing Manpower, were presented their awards by Col. Garrett Harencak, 7th BW vice commander, Aug. 5 at the wing staff meeting.

Freeman entered the Air Force in 1960 and arrived at Dyess after an assignment at Clark Air Base, Philippines in 1970. As an enlisted member, he served as a military training instructor from 1965 to 1972, worked as a Cost Analyst and served a tour in Viet Nam. Freeman retired as a master sergeant in Oct. 1983, and later came to work in civil service June 1985 as a manpower analyst at Dyess.

"My whole adult life has revolved around the military and government because I relate to the type of environment," said Freeman. "Earning this award is a great honor and is a milestone in my life."

Drury entered the Air Force in 1958 and arrived at Dyess in 1978. While on active duty, he served on security forces from 1958 to 1962, and as an aircraft radar avionics technician and avionics instructor. He retired from active duty as a senior master sergeant in 1981. Since 1986, Drury has worked as a project officer developing and implementing the initial and present Contract Quality Assurance Program for Contractor Oversight in support of the B-1 Simulator System at Dyess.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for Jim Drury," said Lt. Col. Davis Walette, 7th Operations Support Squadron chief of Distributed Mission Operations. "He brings many years of irreplaceable simulator experience to a critical part of our mission at Dyess. Getting student and operational B-1 crewmembers ready to train and fight in a frontline weapon system-the B-1. My hat is off to him and his outstanding service to our great country and Dyess."

"I never thought that I would serve this long but just took one day at a time," said Drury. "Most of my time serving in both the military and civil service has been satisfying with some ups and downs. Overall it's been a choice I have fully enjoyed, but the greatest benefit of working with the Air Force is working with truly dedicated people."

Dyess honors civil servants

By 1st Lt. Ben Gamble
Dyess Public Affairs

Three Dyess civilians received high honors for exceptional service to the Air Force in support of operations Enduring and Iraqi Freedom in a ceremony Aug. 5.

Karen Thomas, 7th Mission Support Squadron human resources officer, received the Air Force Award for Exemplary Civilian Service, while Neva Gambrell and Patricia McConville, both of the 7th Mission Support Squadron civilian personnel flight, each received the Air Force Award for Civilian Achievement.

"Civilians get a lot of recognition on base, but very few are recognized with medals," said Thomas. "I was very pleased and proud to be recognized for my work, especially knowing that I was working in direct support of the global combat mission."

The three ladies had a significant impact on the wing mission during the first half of 2003, according to base officials. They were part of a team that hired 17 intermittent firefighters and 12 over-hires during a manning shortage on base due to deployments in support of operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom.

The civilians worked extraordinary measures to deploy Dyess people in support of the global war on terrorism while still sustaining mission support at home with no adverse actions, officials said.

"Without question these individuals epitomize the value our civilian force brings to Team Dyess and the Air Force," said Lt. Col. Norman Lloyd, 7th Mission Support Group deputy commander. "Through the efforts of these ladies, we were able to deploy troops worldwide and still maintain our strong mission capability on the home front. They are but a few of our shining stars among our civilian forces here at Dyess."

Having witnessed the active-duty military come under an ever-increasing operations tempo, the civilians noted Team Dyess excels at welcoming those not in uniform as part of the warfighting team.

"During my time as a civilian at Dyess, there has been a noticeable effort from military leadership to ensure that civilians are aware they are a part of Team Dyess and that our role is just as important as the military's," said Gambrell. "With deployments of the military on the rise, the civilians have stepped up to the challenge and worked to ensure the continued success of the Dyess mission."

Ultimately, the three recipients stressed they are proud to serve their country and that their awards are a result of a strong team effort.

"I would like to thank my colleagues for all their support," said McConville "It is great to be part of a team that participates in something so extraordinary."

Dyess members earn citations of honor

By Staff Sgt. Zachary Wilson
Dyess Public Affairs

Dyess members once again earned a place at the Air Force Association's annual convention in Washington, D.C. in September.

The 317th Airlift Group, crew of the 39th Airlift Squadron's C-130 "Flash 39," and Maj. Frank Link, 28th Bomb Squadron, earned citations of honor from the prestigious group.

A Citation of Honor recognizes outstanding contribution to national defense by an Air Force civilian, unit, or group of individuals, according to AFA officials. The 39th Airlift Squadron received a Citation of Honor during last year's convention.

"Receiving the Air Force Association Citation of Honor is very humbling," said Capt. Jim Harrison, 39th Airlift Squadron co-pilot and member of the "Flash 39" award winning flight crew. "While the award is a tremendous honor, we look at the mission and our actions as just doing our jobs."

The 317th AG was recognized for their efforts in supporting the global war on terrorism during operations Enduring and Iraqi Freedom.

"It was the first war sustained totally by airlift and the 317th AG logged over 40,000 accident-free combat and combat support hours in contingency missions with a 98 percent departure reliability rate," said Col. Paul Montgomery, 317th AG commander. "Additionally, the Group defined the procedures for and transported more than 887 Al Qaeda and Taliban terrorists."

The crew of Flash 39 was made up of members of the 39th Airlift Squadron who were deployed to Afghanistan in support of OEF. The crew participated in a crucial mission to air-drop U.S. Army 82nd Airborne Division soldiers near the Afghanistan border to disrupt the trafficking of people, weapons and drugs. During the mission, the crew experienced difficulties with the weather, a missile lock and a near-catastrophic equipment failure while the soldiers were jumping out the plane.

"Every other C-130 crewmember at Dyess Air Force Base would have done whatever it took to safely accomplish the mission," said Captain Harrison. "Dyess C-130's have been deployed for 31 of the 35 months since the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, and will stay the course until we win the war on terror."

The AFA is an independent, non-profit civilian organization promoting public understanding of aerospace power and the pivotal role it plays in the security of the United States.

The AFA awards highlight the excellent aerospace contributions made by many talented and dedicated Air Force people and AFA members working in support of national defense, said John Politi, AFA chairman.

SOUTHWEST ASIA -- Senior Airman Chad Bailey, 317th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, deployed currently with the 379th Expeditionary Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, and members of the 379th Air Expeditionary Wing honor guard wait for a retreat ceremony to begin at a forward deployed location. Retreat is a military ceremony where flags are taken down at the close of the duty day. Six flags were taken down by the base honor guard, to include the flags of the United States, England, Australia, Singapore, Japan and the host nation.

Mentoring key to mission success

By Maj. David Wiesner
317th Maintenance Squadron commander

As I sat at the keyboard wondering what words of wisdom I could impart in this article, I decided to relay a real-life experience that had such a profound impact on me that it has shaped my thinking and leadership philosophy to this day.

I was a young first lieutenant stationed at Kunsan Air Base, Korea, working F-16s for the first time.

Another lieutenant and I were working the first night shift during the Phase II portion of our operational readiness inspection with many jets to fix when a significant emotional event occurred.

It was about 2 a.m. when we came across our production supervisor laying flat on the ground by his truck parked in front of the hardened aircraft shelter. He had been "taken out" by an inspector general input card neatly placed on his forehead.

After quickly securing the area and taking care of the pro-super, we quickly decided how to ensure we continued to meet mission requirements given our sudden change in manning.

Four of us stumbled through building a plan to get us through the night while trying to have enough jets to cover the first morning's launch in three hours.

Our plan worked to some degree as we had just enough jets to cover the morning lines; thankfully, no spares were needed -- that time -- and all the targets were successfully neutralized.

It wasn't until after the morning launch when the true gravity of our earlier situation hit me square on.

In the heat of the moment I had not realized that my pro super was a single-point failure. Why?

He had not taken the time to train and educate his subordinates and officers on what functions he performed that were necessary to meet the mission.

In a peacetime setting, this experience was just another lesson learned in an exercise environment.

Today, the stakes are much higher. Given our continuous deployment pace supporting contingency operations, each missed or ineffective combat sortie is a missed opportunity in the war efforts; whether it is bombs on target or a medical evacuation mission.

Back home, many junior personnel have to step forward to fill in for their deployed supervisors.

In both cases, the mission presses on and must be effectively executed if we are to be successful.

Now more than ever it is paramount for supervisors at all levels to educate, train and teach their subordinates how to step up to the challenge of taking over when the need arises.

In today's fast-paced, ever-changing environment, mentorship is more than just the latest buzz word on a "nice to do" principle of leadership -- it is absolutely essential and a key ingredient to our mission success.

Lead by example, start at the top

By Senior Master Sgt. Bob Kurucz
7th Munitions Squadron Armament Flight chief

In my opinion, leadership and mentoring go hand-in-hand -- you absolutely cannot have one without the other. In that vein, whether their actions are good or bad, an effective leader will always set the example for their troops.

One particular and most recent example that stands clear in my mind was presented during a recent deployment in support of operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom.

Throughout the entire period, effective leadership was evident in word and action, and that alone had a huge effect on the morale and production of the troops.

For me, it started when I left Dyess early as an advance team member.

From the minute we hit the ground at our deployed location we immediately started making all the arrangements for the rest of the team's arrival so as to make their coming as comfortable and efficient as possible.

It was at that moment that Col. Jeff Beene, the 40th Air Expeditionary Group's commander set the tone for the remaining 100 or so days.

His mindset from the beginning was that the deployment was not a temporary duty -- we were at war.

His positive outlook and focused guidance set the tone for his key supervisors, who in-turn channeled that focus to each subordinate.

I firmly believe the leadership and mentorship practiced there -- from taking the time to explain an answer, demonstrating a procedure first-hand, or just maintaining an encouraging attitude -- were ultimately responsible for the many successes and milestones achieved by the deployed 40th AEG team.

The feeling you get when you leave a deployment with no serious injuries, where the majority of letters written are for outstanding performance, and the look in your troops' faces says they have just had the experience of a lifetime, is not only fulfilling but extremely gratifying.

At that point you recognize your leadership and mentoring practices were effective and successful in influencing and guiding your Airmen's actions to complete the mission successfully.

That's my take on the leadership perspective: lead by example, start at the top to ensure every level of supervision is responsible to the level above and below, and the rest will fall into place.

When listening, do you focus on the speaker, or are the words just going in one ear and out the other?

Do you ask for clarification when not sure of what was just said?

Here are a few tips that helped me become a more effective communicator and leader.

-- Start with your own winning attitude. Be a source of "positive waves." Every day is a great day, but recognize some days are more fun than others.

-- Smile genuinely. In health care, our mantra is "Nobody cares what you know until they know that you care." A warm, engaging smile shows people you are happy to see them and ready to listen.

-- Address an individual by name and shake his or her hand when you can. Open, receptive body language is

The crews were recognized for their historic nonstop around-the-world flight June 2-3 1985. Their flight lasted 36 hours, 13 minutes and 36 seconds. In it, they set two National Aeronautical Association-certified records.

Perception everything, communication is key

By Col. Jim Hougas Jr.
5th Medical Group commander

MINOT AIR FORCE BASE, N.D. -- Effective communication is a two-way street.

When speaking, is your intended message getting through?

Do you have mannerisms that detract from or confuse that intent?

critical. With arms unfolded, sit or stand at his or her level, make solid eye contact and nod your understanding of what is said. Watch the body language of those you speak to so you're sure their perceptions and reactions mirror your intent. Address any mismatches on the spot.

-- Don't take yourself too seriously. Good-natured humor helps keep the shop loose, but never at another's expense.

Walk this talk every day, and those around you will trust you.

Clear and focused multilateral communication will inspire teamwork, and your shop will hum like a finely tuned engine. Even better, you and your Airmen will be prepared for success even on those occasional days that aren't as much fun.

Take pride in new athletic field

Base officials are reminding everyone to abide by the following rules for the new athletic field -- they will be strictly enforced:

Although the field is open to all Dyess members, people must check-in at the fitness center prior to field use. People will be asked to sign an acknowledgment letter that outlines the rules associated with use of the field. Once you sign the letter, you will be accountable to uphold and enforce those rules.

Avoid muddy areas surrounding the field. The field must be kept free of mud and other foreign objects including food and trash. Stains caused by food and mud require intense cleaning and over time will damage the field beyond repair. Use temporary sidewalks to gain access to the field, and to retrieve balls and equipment that go out of bounds.

No smoking within 50 feet of the field. No food or flavored drinks are allowed on the field at anytime. Only plain drinking water is allowed on the field. No vehicles of any type are allowed on the field including bicycles, mowers, etc. Only authorized turf maintaining equipment and emergency vehicles will be allowed on the field.

No benches or bleachers are allowed on the field. Objects of this type can create low spots and can punch holes in the field thus voiding the field's warrantee.

No metal spikes or cleats of any type are allowed on the field to help prevent injuries and damage to the artificial turf. Spikes and cleats cut the life of the field by half.

Pentagon launches 'Operation Blue to Green'

WASHINGTON -- Sailors and Airmen may soon be able to "Go Army" under a new Defense Department program intended to rebalance the size of the military. The program is generating new opportunities for continued service and career advancement for those willing to transfer into the Army from other services.

Under "Operation Blue to Green," the Army will reach out to Sailors and Airmen and underscore the advantages of swapping their current uniform for Army green.

"We admire everyone who serves in the nation's uniform," said Lt. Gen. "Buster" Hagenbeck, the Army's uniformed personnel chief, "but I know that anyone who looks closely at today's Army will find a lot to be excited about -- we are growing, and we need experienced people to lead that transition."

Both the House and the Senate have shown an interest in hiking Army strength by perhaps tens of thousands over the next few years, although the final number has not yet been set, officials said.

At the same time, the Navy is planning a force reduction of 8,000 in fiscal 2005, with the Air Force trimming more than 20,000 over the same period.

When the shifts are done, officials said, Pentagon leaders are determined to see to it that the best people are still in uniform -- even if that means a different uniform. And they plan to achieve that outcome entirely by way of voluntary choice.

Where necessary, the Army plans to use bonuses to stimulate the needed service transfers and to carefully guide the experience mix so that promotions stay strong.

The focus of the effort centers on grades E-1 through E-5, but other grades will be considered in meeting Army needs. For example, the Army will continue to have a sizable demand in areas that share much common ground with other services in knowledge, skill and ability. These include law enforcement, health care, communications and intelligence.

As an incentive to join the Army under Operation Blue to Green, bonuses are being offered to those who have skills that convert to the Army's most needed military occupational specialties.

There are 120 Air Force specialties that will transfer into 37 Army jobs, and the Navy has 112 ratings that will transfer into 42 Army specialties, said Col. Norvel Dillard, chief of the Army's enlisted accessions division.

"Those are 'Job One,' but we're looking at others as well," said the colonel. "We're also looking for officers, primarily junior officers."

Anyone who makes the shift would carry over all creditable active federal service, and procedures will ensure that those migrating within the active force experience no break in service.

General Hagenbeck said the program is being designed to make certain there is no break in service and no impact on Montgomery G.I. Bill benefits already "banked" by a servicemember.

The procedure is generally expected to operate like this:

The Army will first match its needs to the skills in other services. An outgrowth of that effort will be the identification of places where that audience is concentrated, so that an orientation team can be scheduled to visit that base. The team would then meet with interested servicemembers and their families and explain the options.

Following a short presentation, one-to-one dialogue would be encouraged with team members on the spot -- some from the Army's Recruiting Command, who can explain the mechanics of the program, and some from operational Army units eager to explain the Army today. The Blue to Green Web site also is being expanded to include chat rooms.

"We are eager to tell our story," said General Hagenbeck, "and we'll take whatever time a person needs to make a fully informed choice and to be comfortable with their decisions. ... We look forward to that dialogue."

Once a person's eligibility is confirmed, the losing service would be contacted to effect an agreement to release. New service agreements would be drafted, and the Sailor or Airman would make the move. In many cases, they would carry a directly transferable skill. Otherwise, training in the new skill would be scheduled as part of the move. In order to qualify, the Sailor or Airman must be eligible for re-enlistment, must be physically fit, and meet Army height and weight standards.

If the skill is transferable, the new Soldier would be scheduled for a new, four-week warrior transition course, where he or she will be offered a curriculum that provides essential skills and abilities needed in the new service. Topics would include an orientation on organization, rank, uniform wear and career progression. The first course is scheduled to start in September at Fort Knox, Ky. It is planned as transition training, not boot camp, officials said.

Those transitioning to a new skill, particularly in combat-arms areas like special operations, would participate in the full range of developmental training to hone current talents and provide a new set of skills and abilities. Officers would not attend a warrior course, but would normally attend training unique to their branch depending on their grade and experience.

Upon transfer, new Soldiers would be eligible to compete for promotion so long as they meet Army minimums, which can be years shorter than other services.

The Army's recruiting goal for fiscal 2005, which begins in October, is about 80,000. Of that number, the Army hopes to recruit at least 8,000 prior-service troops. (Courtesy of American Forces Press Service)

Research lab welcomes 15-year-old doctoral student

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. -- Air Force Research Laboratory experts routinely welcome college students to their facilities and give them a taste of what scientists and engineers do for the military. In turn, they hope to harness the young talent after they graduate.

Playing host to Alia Sabur for summer research is not really any different -- except for the fact she is only 15 years old and pursuing her doctorate in nanotechnology at Drexel University in Philadelphia.

The nation's youngest doctoral student, Alia graduated summa cum laude from New York State University at Stony Brook with her Bachelor of Science degree in applied mathematics when she was 14 years old.

For her doctoral studies, she is spending the summer doing research at the lab here. Her introduction to the Air Force's world of scientific research and development is courtesy of a national defense science and engineering graduate fellowship program. The lab's office of scientific research is paying her tuition and fees, plus she is receiving a monetary stipend for the duration of her studies.

Experts in the office of scientific research oversee Air Force fundamental or basic research efforts across the nation at universities and lab facilities. Research efforts are also supported through the office's European and Asian facilities.

Lab officials hope Alia's extended visit to the lab's rocket propulsion technology research facilities this summer will provide an orientation to the broad spectrum of research and development pursuits being conducted here.

And Alia's hope is to contribute to those efforts. "I hope my research (this summer) will provide an introduction to the cutting edge research taking place at Edwards," Alia said. "The (rocket lab) folks are really friendly and enthusiastic. They really enjoy what they are doing."

Earlier this year, Alia said her scientific pursuit is "the study and creation of electronic devices using optics at the nanoscale."

Experts said the study area, known as NanoPhotonics, is a very promising research area for extremely small devices useful for unlimited scientific and medical applications.

Identified as a prodigy at the age of 8 months when she began reading and talking, Alia was enrolled in college at age 10 to pursue her degree. She was the youngest female to graduate from college last year.

Besides her academic studies, Alia is a prodigy in the musical arena as well, claiming her passion for science is as important as her passion for music. She is known for her musical abilities with the clarinet and has been playing with orchestras since she was 11. She studies with Ricardo Morales, the Philadelphia Orchestra's principal clarinetist.

For her personal enjoyment, Alia said she likes Broadway shows, magic and music ranging from classical to blues and jazz. Practicing her clarinet for three hours every day, she also welcomes the opportunity to perform in musical concerts. One of her favorite selections is Mozart's "Clarinet Concerto."

When asked about encouraging other young women to enter the sciences, Alia said, "Girls are afraid of being perceived as nerds or dweebs. I try to show that you can be normal, have friends and not act like a dweeb."

The lab's research and development facilities here provide propulsion directorate scientists and engineers with the Air Force's most modern rocket propulsion technology capabilities in the nation. Almost every American space launch vehicle, ballistic missile and spacecraft propulsion system can trace its legacy back to here. (Courtesy of Air Force Materiel Command News Service)

Scientists studying aircrew long-haul comfort

By Larine Barr
Air Force Research Laboratory
Public Affairs

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio -- For many Air Force aircrews, discomfort caused by sitting on extended missions is just part of the job.

Col. Kerry Keithcart, a KC-135 Stratotanker pilot for the 434th Air Refueling Wing at Grissom Air Reserve Base, Ind., said he and his crew do what they can to make those longer missions more bearable.

"Some of us try to stretch and that's of some value. We also drink a lot of water to stay hydrated," Colonel Keithcart said. "But when you're sitting in one position for as many as 13 hours at a time, you're going to experience different aches and pains."

Colonel Keithcart and many others in the aircrew population have experienced specific physiological problems associated with sitting on seat cushions in current Air Force aircraft ranging from muscle soreness to overall fatigue. To address those problems, scientists at the Air Force Research Laboratory's human effectiveness directorate are studying how different seat cushion materials and designs affect those problems.

Test subjects were photographed while sitting on the seat cushions for various periods of time, said project manager Joseph Pelletiere.

"Photographs reveal dangerous pressure points that can develop when people sit for long periods of time," Pelletiere said.

But these are not your ordinary photographs. They are collected from a device called an "Xsensor" which is made up of 900 sensors that respond to pressure.

"The device works on capacitance technology, and as the space

Joseph Pelletiere

WRIGHT-PATTERSON AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio -- A volunteer test subject sits in a mock-up ejection seat at the Air Force Research Laboratory's human effectiveness directorate. The seat is fitted with a special device that measures how much pressure is being exerted on the seat cushion and where the "hot spots" are located. Those "hot spots" can cause reduced blood flow leading to blood clots and other physiological problems. The goal of the testing is to develop improved cushions.

inside the sensors changes, an output voltage is recorded by a computer and displayed on a computer screen," Pelletiere said. "This pressure mat is only fractions of an inch thick and very pliable. As such, it conforms quite well to a variety of seat cushions and the human anatomy to give a reading on how much pressure is being exerted, and where the 'hot spots' are located for different people on different cushions."

The obvious question seems to be: Why does it matter what the pressure distribution is for a crewmember on a cushion? The answer lies in preventing deep vein thrombosis and trying to prevent sore spots that cause people to squirm, Pelletiere explained.

"The risk of DVT has been shown to increase with the amount of time the tissues in the body are compressed and leg muscle activity is reduced," he said. "This occurs because the deepest part of the calf muscles partially relies on muscle activity to promote good blood flow."

"Furthermore, with increased periods of pressure applied to the body's tissues, the capillaries begin to close off, reducing the amount of blood flow and causing a numbing sensation. Because of this reduced blood flow, it's possible to develop a clot that can be dislodged and travel to other areas of the body where it can be a big problem."

While the risk of developing DVT is low, the other adverse effects of sitting for long periods are quite common -- tingling and numbness in the extremities, leg and back pain and overall fatigue, Pelletiere said. For commercial long-haul flights, passengers can generally get up out of their seats and move around if need be; however, most crewmembers are not afforded this same luxury.

"It's not uncommon for some missions to last from eight to 44 hours of seat time," Pelletiere said. "While there are some techniques such as stretching exercises that can alleviate some of the tension, the search has been on to develop new passive technologies that can improve comfort and reduce fatigue with the goal of improving the overall performance and well-being of the crewmember."

Mask liner giving Airmen a second skin

By Lanorris Askew
Warner Robins Air Logistics Center
Public Affairs

ROBINS AIR FORCE BASE, Ga. -- A simple innovation in chemical protection gear could save thousands of Airmen's lives and millions of Air Force dollars, according to the support equipment team.

Known as the second skin, or SS, the recent addition to the MCU-2P and the MCU-2A/P personal protective gas masks adds a literal extra layer of protection against chemical, biological and nuclear warfare agents.

"The idea is simple, but I think it'll do wonders for the masks," said Don Waddell, from the Warner Robins Air Logistics Center.

Made of a rubber-type material, the second skin is an overlay for the mask which extends the time it is effective in a hostile area. Before the addition, the masks had to be discarded after exposure to chemical agents, but with the second skin the masks may be used again by removing the skin after the decontamination process and replacing it with another.

According to the team, the price difference between the SS and a mask is astronomical and that little piece of rubber saves the Air Force roughly $170 per mask.

Earl Duck, an equipment specialist, said the masks are being given to Airmen who are, or could be, deployed to a hostile area.

Because of the emphasis on air and space expeditionary forces, this means almost everyone in uniform, he said.

While the actual protection levels of the masks and the second skin are classified, with or without the skin the masks provide wearers a high level of protection against chemicals such as blister and nerve agents, said Johnnie Kincaid, the program manager. The second skin however, expands that protection to the next level with additional thickness.

The Air Force's initial development of the SS was done at Brooks City-Base, Texas, but the original group to develop the SS was the Army through the Edgewood Chemical Biological Center in Edgewood, Md., for use with their M-40 masks.

Sustaining the skins and all technical responsibilities are handled through the center. In addition, the Defense Logistics Agency is the supply source and covers all procurement and distribution.

In the past three years, more than 314,000 masks have been fielded, and since the first quarter of 2003, when the second skins were first available, more than 500,000 have been put in storage at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio.

The new skins are issued as needed to people deploying to potential high-threat areas, said Laurie Beebe, an engineer. All new mobility Airmen are issued a mask, and workers here fill those new needs as well as replacements daily, she said.

2005 NCO retraining program under way

By Tech. Sgt. David Jablonski
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON -- Air Force officials want more than 1,000 noncommissioned officers to pick a new job during the voluntary phase of the fiscal 2005 NCO retraining program that began Aug. 3.

Eligible NCOs have until Sept. 30 to apply. If the Air Force does not meet its goal of placing 1,098 Airmen from overage career fields into shortage career fields, a non-voluntary second phase may be implemented.

Rosters showing those identified in Phase 1 as susceptible to involuntary retraining, sorted by Air Force specialty code and in order of vulnerability, are posted on a secure Web page accessible at: www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/enlskills/retraining/retraining.htm.

The complete list of retraining-in opportunities is on the retraining advisory at the military personnel flight.

Airmen who wish to view their current standing should follow the links from the retraining Web page to the AFPC secure page and log in using their Virtual MPF password. A retraining link will take them to the listing of specialty codes and grades. By clicking on current grade, or projected grade, NCOs will be able to see their current ranking amongst those who are vulnerable.

Air Force medical officials clarify policy on elective cosmetic surgery

By G.W. Pomeroy
Air Force Surgeon General Public Affairs

WASHINGTON -- Air Force doctors perform cosmetic and reconstructive surgeries as part of essential training, but elective cosmetic procedures such as breast augmentations are not routinely available as perks to servicemembers and their families, according to Air Force Medical Service officials.

Recent published reports in civilian media suggested that elective procedures are prevalent in the military health-care system.

Some reports also indicated that free cosmetic surgery is common among servicemembers and their families.

Air Force doctors, and their counterparts across the Defense Department, perform elective cosmetic surgeries, but not to the extent people have been led to believe.

In fiscal 2003, Air Force doctors performed roughly 50,000 total procedures, of which 405 fell into the six categories of cosmetic surgery: abdominoplasty or "tummy tuck," 25; blepharoplasty, (eyelids), 50; breast augmentation, 116; face lift, 31; liposuction, 151; and rhinoplasty, (nose), 32.

"The fact is all beneficiaries are eligible for these procedures but there are policies in place to govern this aspect of the military health-care system," said Lt. Col. (Dr.) Joseph Legan, the Air Force Medical Service's chief consultant for surgical services.

"There is no charge for reconstructive surgery related to trauma, burns or disease," Doctor Legan said. "Solely cosmetic surgery for an active-duty Airman requires no payment unless cosmetic implants are part of the procedure; the implants are paid for by the Airman prior to surgery."

No surgery is done on active-duty members for weight reduction, Doctor Legan said.

"For other beneficiaries, solely cosmetic surgery is chargeable based on the procedure and whether it is performed on an inpatient or ambulatory basis," Doctor Legan said.

Payment arrangements are finalized before patients are placed on the surgery schedule.

Doctor Legan also said that solely cosmetic surgery is done only on a space-available basis, and may constitute no more than 10 percent of a plastic surgeon's workload.

He emphasized that such skills are crucial for Air Force doctors to keep pace with their civilian counterparts.

"Air Force plastic surgeons, as with other specialists, require hours of education, training and continuous practice to keep their skills within medical standards,"

Doctor Legan said. "Without cosmetic surgery as part of their scope of practice, they would be deprived of experience in a fundamental part of their field."

"Additionally, military surgeons perform reconstructive surgery that often entails some degree of aesthetics," he said. "Experience with cosmetic cases gives surgeons an ability to achieve the best possible results for reconstructive patients."

"The majority of our cosmetic cases are done in conjunction with training of surgical residents," the doctor explained. "This not only teaches skills but is a necessary part of training well-rounded surgeons who are every bit as good as their civilian counterparts."

Within the Air Force, plastic surgery is currently available at Wilford Hall Medical Center in San Antonio; Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio; Keesler AFB, Miss.; Travis AFB, Calif.; and Andrews AFB, Md.

DYESS, LOCAL CHILDREN START SCHOOL MONDAY

Tips for when walking to school

- Choose the safest route and walk it with your children. Look for the most direct route with the fewest street crossings. Try to choose routes where school safety patrols will be present. (Check with your school if you're not sure.) Children under age 10 should walk with an adult or older child every day because they do not have the necessary skills to judge the speed or distance of oncoming traffic. Also, their peripheral vision is one third less than that of adults.
- Teach children to obey all traffic signals and markings. Children should be taught the meaning of all traffic markers (for example, a flashing "walk" sign is not an automatic "go" signal.)
- Make sure children look to the left, to the right and to the left again for moving vehicles before crossing the street.
- Teach children not to enter the street from between parked cars or from behind bushes or shrubs. Darting into the street accounts for 50 to 70 percent of pedestrian injuries among children ages 9 and under.
- Because drivers have a more difficult time seeing pedestrians, warn children to be extra alert in bad weather.

To help support the daily flow of school students and traffic, the base's Delaware Gate will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, said Master Sgt. Steven Guerrero, 7th Security Forces Squadron.

(The Minnesota Safety Council contributed to this report's safety tips.)

Tips for DRIVERS

• It's especially important to slow down and watch out for kids at the beginning of the school year. Students are excited, apprehensive, not familiar with the new school schedule and may not pay attention to traffic safety practices. Children are not small adults and may not have enough skills to cope with traffic. Be aware that all drivers are responsible for child safety near school zones or school buses.

• Remember, when you see a school bus, all traffic from both directions must stop when bus lights are flashing red and stop signs are extended. Never pass a stopped school bus loading or unloading children; it's the law!

• Divided highways are the only exception to passing a school bus in oncoming lanes if the median is over five feet wide or has a raised, impassable divider.

• If you see yellow flashing lights it means the school bus is preparing to stop. This alerts drivers to slow down and be prepared to stop -- not speed up to pass the bus quickly. Begin moving again only when the red flashing lights are turned off, the stop arm is withdrawn and the bus begins to move.

• Be alert for kids who might dart into the street without looking because they arrive late at the bus stop. Watch for students playing and gathering near a bus stop. Slow down and observe posted speed limits in school zones at all times. Look for children walking in the street, especially if there are no sidewalks. Be careful to watch for kids walking or biking to school when leaving your garage or backing out of a driveway.

• If you drive kids to school, make sure every child is buckled in a child safety seat, a booster seat, or with a lap and shoulder belt that is age, weight and height appropriate. It's safer for all children ages 12 and under to sit in the back seat of your car whenever possible.

• When driving kids to school, leave with plenty of time to meet the child's schedule and your own. Accidents often occur at school because drivers are in a hurry and late for work. It is easy for parents or other drivers to become lax after several months of zipping past largely deserted schools during summer months. Adults must switch "mind-sets" as children return to school this fall. Slow down. Stay alert. Watch out for kids.

Tips for riding the school bus

• An estimated 23.5 million students ride school buses daily. Many injuries occur when children are boarding or exiting because a blind spot extends approximately 10 feet in front of the bus, obstructing the view of the driver. Children are not aware of this blind spot and may mistakenly believe that if they can see the bus, the bus driver can see them.

• A child's behavior at the bus stop is an important aspect of school bus safety. While waiting for the bus, kids should stay out of the street. After getting off the bus, children should, if walking in front of the bus, cross at least 10 feet in front of it.

- While on the bus, children should observe the following safety rules:
- Remain seated at all times and keep the aisles clear
- Don't throw objects. Don't shout or distract the driver unnecessarily
- Keep your head and arms inside the bus at all times

Cycling team finishes week-long, nearly 500-mile ride

By Cynthia Bauer
Air Mobility Command Public Affairs

CLINTON, Iowa -- More than 100 Air Force cyclists wheeled into Clinton, Iowa, at high noon July 31. It was the end of a week and almost 500 miles on the road for the riders participating in the Des Moines Register's Annual Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa.

Team Air Force arrived in Clinton in a two-column formation led by three-wheelers bearing the U.S. and Air Force flags. The arrival of the 100-plus-member team into the last town on the route has become a RAGBRAI tradition.

"The sight is impressive," said cyclist Penny Gerholdt of Cedar Falls. "We can't wait to see the whole team riding in."

A big part of that interest is because the team has gathered fans along the road. Bob Osgood, also of Cedar Falls, was riding in his 17th RAGBRAI.

He used one word to describe his impression of the team: "Friendly!"

"The team members are some of the best to talk to. And the (small giveaway items) are great for the little kids," he said. "It's great (public relations) for the Air Force."

Team director Col. Bob Norman from the Tanker/Airlift Control Center at Scott Air Force Base, Ill., said the team comes into contact with thousands of potential recruits among the more than 10,000 riders and thousands of spectators, so it is important the team provides a good impression of the Air Force.

"Our team is well-respected by cyclists and citizens alike," said Colonel Norman. "It's important for our total force team of active, Reserve, Guard, civilian and family members to give folks an idea of the quality of Air Force people. From encouraging other riders to helping folks fix flat tires, we do what we can to project a positive image."

CLINTON, Iowa -- Tech. Sgt. Brad Whitmill of Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., and Tech. Sgt. Joel Weatherhead of Kunsan Air Base, Korea, wave to bystanders at the end of the 32nd Des Moines Register's Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa. The cyclists were among the more than 100 members of Team Air Force and almost 10,000 other riders in the weeklong, 490-mile ride across the state. Team Air Force rode into town at high noon July 31 in a two-column formation, a RAGBRAI tradition.

The ride began July 25 in Onawa, on the western edge of the state, with a two-column formation led by Brig. Gen. Robertus C.N. "Dutch" Remkes, commander of Air Force Recruiting Service.

By July 28, the cyclists had ridden nearly 275 miles to spend the night camping on the grounds of the Iowa Veterans Home in Marshalltown. It was here that Tech. Sgt. Eric Wells from Air Force Communications Agency at Scott AFB, chose to re-enlist.

"I found it a very unique way to re-enlist," said Sergeant Wells. "I was able to share my re-enlistment with the veterans here in Marshalltown, my fellow cyclists and possible future recruits."

At the last team meeting late July 30, the team of Air Force cyclists also got to share in Maj.

Matthew Bohn's promotion ceremony to lieutenant colonel. The officer is assigned to the Air Force Technical Applications Center at Patrick AFB, Fla.

By July 31, the team had faced a week of some extreme conditions including steep climbs, stiff winds and pelting rain.

Team Air Force also had rewards in the support of Iowans and other cyclists who would call out "Go, Air Force!" when they saw the highly visible red, white and blue jerseys.

Team Air Force cyclists come from Air Force bases worldwide to ride in RAGBRAI, now in its 32nd year.

It is the oldest and longest touring bicycle ride in the world.

This year marked the 10th year the Air Force has participated in the annual event.

Three AF athletes competing in 2004 Summer Olympic Games

By Samantha Quigley
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON -- After years of hard work, three Air Force athletes are set to compete at the 2004 Summer Olympic Games in Athens.

Thousands of athletes have begun arriving and checking into the Olympic Village, with opening ceremonies scheduled for today.

Second Lt. Seth Kelsey, 22, of Brush Prairie, Wash., will compete in the men's epee fencing event. He is a 2003 graduate of the U.S. Air Force Academy, where he earned a degree in behavioral science. The lieutenant has earned Senior "A" World Cup bronze medals in Tallin, Estonia, in 2002 and Havana in 2003.

Capt. Kevin Eastler, 26, of Framington, Maine, will compete in the 20-kilometer race walk during the track and field portion of the games. He graduated from the U.S. Air Force Academy in 1999 with a degree in mechanical engineering. While he placed second in the 2000 Olympic trials, he was denied a spot in the games because he failed to earn an "A" qualifying time. At this year's trials he placed third with a time of 1:28:49.

First Lt. James Parker, 28, of Great Falls, Mont., is also competing during the track and field portion of the games. The lieutenant will compete in the hammer throw. He majored in exercise science at Utah State, where he was a state discus champion and two-time state shot put champ. Lieutenant Parker placed first in the 2004 Olympic trials and was the 2003 USA Outdoor champion.

To Whom It
May Concern
If you ever have had the honor to meet a man named Arthory don't let him pass you by. He is a special and caring person.
If you are ever loved by him, don't ever let him go! He will go to extreme and treat you like no one else will. He is an exception to the rules and should be respected.
If you ever get to be that lucky, pull a ring on his finger and never let him go! Don't be like me and let the best man in the world pass you by...
