New year brings new commander to Dyess

By Capt. David Honchul
Dyess Public Affairs

The arrival of the new year brings new leadership to the base as the 7th Bomb Wing holds a change of command ceremony at 10 a.m. today at the three-bay hangar.

Brig. Gen. Wendell Griffin relinquishes command of the wing to Col. Jonathan George during the ceremony. George comes to the base from the Pentagon where he served as the director of the Executive Action Group for the Secretary of the Air Force and Chief of Staff at Headquarters U.S. Air Force.

Commander since November 2000, Griffin departs the base for Miami where he will serve as the director for strategy, policy and plans at U.S. Southern Command. Under Griffin's leadership for the past 25 months, the 7th Bomb Wing has seen increases in mission capable rates for the B-1s, exceeding the Air Combat Command standard for the past six months -- a first for the wing. During that time, the wing also achieved unprecedented rates in excess of 81 percent during one month.

The wing also deployed B-1s to a forward operating location for the second time since the Bones came to Dyess. Deployed as the 405th Air Expeditionary Wing commander, Griffin led the B-1s into combat. Dyess crews flew over 300 missions, dropping over 1,100 Joint Direct Attack Munitions on Al Qaeda and Taliban forces. The unit was heavily involved in supporting ground forces during Operation Anaconda. Griffin flew nearly 100 combat hours himself, becoming the first general officer to fly the B-1 into combat.

At home, major construction projects addressed quality of life issues throughout the base. The base and local community completed and opened the Quail Hollow privatized housing project and the child development center. Construction began on a new fitness facility and the new combined squadron operations center for the 317th Airlift Group.

"I didn't do any of those things...you did," Griffin told the crowd at his farewell dinner Jan. 3. "Those projects are the result of the hard work of the people at this wing. This assignment has been the highlight of my career. (Today) is going to be the saddest day of my career."

not a stranger to the B-1 or the bomber community. George entered the Air Force in 1980 after completing Officer Training School. His assignments over the past 22 years include a three-year tour at Grand Forks Air Force Base, N.D., where he served as a B-1 operations officer and an instructor aircraft commander with the 46th Bomb Squadron. He has also served three tours at Whiteman AFB, Mo., serving as the 509th Bomb Wing chief of safety from November 1993 to December 1994; the 393rd BS commander; the 509th Operations Group deputy commander from August 1994 to October 1997; and later as the 509th OG commander from June 2000 to December 2001. Warfighters: Our cause is just; our motives, methods are pure

By Lt. Col. Tim Saffold
354th Fighter Squadron

DAVIS-MONTHAN AIR FORCE BASE, Ariz. -- Everyday, we open new chapters in our lives and we close old ones. We fill those chapters with decisions and actions that we hope will make us happier and more productive.

We work diligently to minimize negatives and accentuate positives. However, no matter how hard we try, we can't control all the variables, and we often find our chapters being written by forces we can't foresee or readily identify.

The American warrior knows all this to be true. How do we cope with the stress and adversity presented by those unexpected changes?

How do we press on and drive for excellence? How do we maintain our commitments?

"I am an American, fighting for my country and our way of life," opens the American warrior's Code of Conduct. These are powerful words for a powerful entity -- the American warrior. Ours is a special life, one filled with chapters of success and opportunity; with joy and exuberance; with pride and hope; and with commitment and devotion to ideals much bigger than ourselves.

The Code of Conduct is a single point reference to build the spirit and courage to overcome change and accept challenge. It is the stone that sharpens the razors' edge of the American fighting team. Through it, we honor our nation and our team, the United States Air Force.

There are other documents to inspire us. "These are the times that try men's souls; the summer soldier and the sunshine patriot in this conflict will shrink from service to their country but he who stands it now deserves the love and thanks of all men and women..." opens Thomas Paine's "American Crisis."

Paine reflects on the harsh conditions facing a ragged, war-torn continental army bunkered at Valley Forge in the dead of winter. He beseeches Americans to stand firm, that theirs is a just cause, and that the concepts of freedom and liberty will prevail.

And now, the chapters of our lives open to another cause that is equally just, and we occupy center stage with the capacity to control and shape it as we see fit. We are Americans and we are fighting for our country and our way of life against an enemy who knows brutal murder as an ally; an enemy who wants to murder not only Americans, but any nation that loves freedom.

Witness the recent events on the island of Bali. These are the times that try our souls. As war fighters, we, possibly more than anyone else, would like for peace to work so that we may return to our families, our country and to a peaceful way of life. But we will not shrink from service to our country.

We are well trained and highly motivated. We are patriots committed to a free world. We will endure all and we will rise victorious in all that we do. Our cause is just; our motives are pure and our methods will not fail.

Stand proud warriors, and write this chapter -- your chapter -- of American history for future generations to respect and admire.

Dyess Warriors,

This will be my last Commander's Corner. Today, I will stand before you and relinquish command of this great wing to the new, incoming commander. I can tell you it will be the saddest day of my career. The 7th Bomb Wing is a tremendous unit and it has been my honor to serve as your commander. This is the best job I have ever had in the Air Force. Living here in Abilene and serving at Dyess Air Force Base have truly been the highlight of my career.

As I prepare to depart, I want to share some thoughts with you. As you know, during my tenure as your commander, I have asked you to focus on three things...mission, people, and safety...and you have done that magnificently.

Mission: You dedicated professionals took the B-1 weapon system to new heights of excellence. Through your outstanding efforts, the B-1 fleet here at Dyess attained mission capable rates never before seen in this weapon system...and you sustained them. You proved yourself in combat during Operation Enduring Freedom as you responded in true Dyess Air Force Base form to the events of Sep. 11, 2001. You can be justifiably proud of your performance and the results...you men and women reaffirmed this wing's status as one of the premiere combat units in the United States Air Force.

People: Our people are the very best...and they prove it every day. You folks have performed miracles over the past two years...winning awards such as the Hennessey, the Drake, the Gerrit D. Foster, and many, many more...proving once again that it is not the technology...it is not the infrastructure...it is the people that make the mission happen! Our people are our most precious resource and we must never forget this fact.

Safety: You superstars set new standards in the safety arena...winning the ACC flying safety award for 2001. You have learned to take care of each other and to use operational risk management to the maximum effect. I am very proud of the strides we have made in this area.

As I depart, I will never forget the outstanding men and women of Team Dyess...you will always hold a special place in my heart. I challenge you to continue performing in the same magnificent manner for the new boss that you have for me...and continue to carry Dyess Air Force Base forward.

In closing, I salute you. It has been my honor to serve alongside of you. God bless each and every one of you and God bless America.

Dyess NCOs STEP promoted

By Senior Airman
Lindsey Maurice
Dyess Public Affairs

Two Dyess NCOs were recently promoted to technical sergeant under the Stripes for Exceptional Performers program.

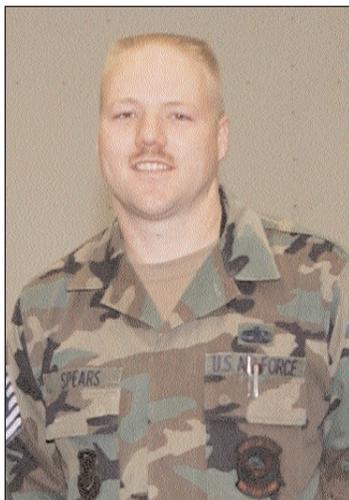

Tech. Sgt. Keith Spears, 317th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron crew chief, was presented his new stripes during his unit's roll call by Col. Steven King, 317th Airlift Group deputy commander, Dec. 31. Tech. Sgt. Michael Bradberry, 7th Bomb Wing command section NCO-in-charge of information management, was presented his new stripes by Brig. Gen. Wendell Griffin, 7th Bomb Wing commander during a squadron commander's call Tuesday.

Spears reflected back on the excitement of his surprise promotion almost two weeks ago.

"I think shock sums up my feelings at that moment," Spears said. "It was definitely a pleasant surprise to say the least."

Bradberry agreed.

"I was very surprised about the whole thing," Bradberry said. "I had no clue. Just the night before (I was promoted) I was studying to take the promotion test. My daughter had come into the room and asked me what I was doing. When I told her I was studying to be promoted she told me 'don't worry, you'll make it, Daddy.' I guess she knew what she was talking about."

Tech. Sgt. Keith Spears

Spears has been in the Air Force nine years and Dyess is his third assignment. As a C-130 flying crew chief for the 317th AG, Spears is responsible for supervising maintenance on 29 aircraft.

Lauded by his supervisors as an exceptional performer, Spears is noted as a great asset to the 317th AG.

"(Spears) constantly demonstrates dynamic leadership," said Tech. Sgt. Anthony Leineweber, 317th AMXS crew chief section chief. "He has unsurpassed experience with a vast knowledge of engine systems and unparalleled dedication to his aircraft."

During Spears' Air Force career he has accomplished many things, Leineweber said.

Spears has been instrumental in 806 tactical-combat missions, delivering 2,343 troops and 1,789 short tons of cargo, said 317th AG officials. He has also flown on 13 combat-support missions delivering crucial supplies to enforcers throughout Southwest Asia.

As a flying crew chief to Cambodia, Spears helped recover the remains of eight troops who were missing in action from a downed H-3 during the Vietnam War.

Bradberry has also had a successful Air Force career since his enlistment 13 years ago, said Senior Master Sgt. Tracy Walker, 7th BW command section superintendent.

"(Bradberry) is an NCO who makes things happen," Walker said. "He has a proven track record of providing the best administrative and workgroup management support."

At every base he has been assigned to, Bradberry was hand-picked to work in the wing command administration section, Walker said.

While stationed at Andersen Air Base, Guam, Bradberry managed the dormitory of the quarter program. He managed a $10,000 dorm improvement fund, which was rated best in the Pacific Air Forces Command.

Bradberry was also presented the "552" award by the 552nd Aircraft Control Wing commander at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., -- an honor that is only bestowed upon two percent of the wing's 3,400 personnel.

As a member of the 9th Bomb Squadron, Bradberry negotiated with other units at Dyess to replace broken network equipment. As a result of his actions, he ended up saving the unit $4,400 by eliminating the requirement to purchase network switches, Walker said.

"Sergeant Bradberry is an outstanding mentor and leader," Walker said. "It (was) imperative we STEP (promoted) this truly exemplary NCO."

Historical look at High Year of Tenure limits

Air Force announces change in enlisted high year tenure

By Maj. John Thomas

Air Force Personnel Center Public Affairs

AIR FORCE PERSONNEL CENTER -- Airmen serving in most enlisted ranks will now have an additional two years available to serve on active duty.

The change, recently approved by the Secretary of the Air Force, is part of an initiative to retain enlisted people's skills and experience, officials said.

Called the "High Year of Tenure," the policy provides that senior airmen will now be able to serve up to 12 years of total service; technical sergeants will be eligible to serve up to 24 years of service; master sergeants up to 26 years; and senior master sergeants up to 28. Staff sergeant (20 years) and chief master sergeant (30 years) limits are unchanged.

"Extending years in service will increase our ability to adequately sustain a highly skilled enlisted force and reduce experienced NCO shortages created by both the drawdown in the early '90s and lower retention trends for the past several years," said Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force Gerald Murray.

Seen as a good option for most airmen, later HYT dates may affect the status of assignments, promotions, reenlistments and evaluations for thousands of enlisted members. In the next few months, some will face important decisions.

"No one will be forced to stay longer, but a lot of people will be able to -- if it fits their plans," said Master Sgt. Mike Hall, superintendent of retirements at the Air Force Personnel Center. "We encourage everyone near their high year of tenure to visit their local military personnel flight, especially those with planned or pending assignments, separations or retirements."

In the case of senior airmen, HYT dates will automatically be extended to 12 years, regardless of any scheduled separation date after Dec. 31. Those planning to leave the service in the near future may be allowed to continue to serve at their present duty location or be reassigned, based on Air Force needs, officials said.

Those airmen who have already spent government funds associated with a separation or retirement will be exempt from the changes, officials said. Typically that includes people who have already shipped household goods, shipped a car or if their families have already moved to a new location using government funds.

“Over the last few years, Team Dyess has proven itself to be a frontline combat unit,” George said. “Clearly, the opportunity to be posted with a frontline combat unit is both an honor and an opportunity to contribute to our nation’s defense.

“Since the last time I served in the B-1 program, it has matured immensely,” he added. “The program brings speed, precision and payload to the fight better than any other system. The B-1’s future will continue to be a big part of our nation’s combat capability.”

As he takes command, George said he will seek to continue increasing mission focus and building an environment that promotes the “growth of our teammates.”

“We need to leverage resources and technology that provides for more efficient combat capability,” he said. “We need to continue to build an environment that maximizes opportunities for our teammates, and we need to increase stability to counter a high-operations tempo world.”

The colonel and his wife, Kelly, have three children, Hannah, Graham and Mason.

Dyess civilian celebrates 30 years of DOD service

Senior Airman Lindsey Maurice
Dyess Public Affairs

A Dyess flight chief was presented her 30-year government service pin during a ceremony Dec. 19 at the 7th Support Group headquarters building.

B.J. Fender, 7th Civil Engineer Squadron resources flight chief, received the award due to her faithful service to the Department of Defense over the last three decades.

"B.J. has proudly served the DOD and the Air Force for the majority of her life and a quick walk in her office will tell you what a great asset she has been," said Lt. Col. Darren Daniels, 7th CES commander. "She has awards, certificates and memorabilia from all over the world that sing her accolades. I'm very proud to have her in my squadron."

Fender began her career in 1971 as a civil engineer government employee with the U.S. Army, when she was stationed in Hampton, Va. She continued serving as an Army government civilian through two more assignments, before transitioning into the Marine Corps while stationed in Okinawa, Japan. In 1980, Fender made the decision to cross into the Air Force.

Since then, Fender traveled to many more countries and stateside bases around the world. Some of her tours of duty include Germany, Korea, Holland and Italy. Stateside, she has been stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill.; Columbus Air Force Base, Miss.; and the Air Force Academy, Colo.

"The highlight of my career would have to be the traveling," Fender said. "It has been such a wonderful opportunity to see the world and to have been able to share that with my children. Raising them around such diverse cultures has really played a positive role in their lives."

"I appreciate all the DOD has done for my family and I," Fender said. "This career has really been a blessing."

B.J. Fender, 7th Civil Engineer Squadron resources flight chief, was presented her 30-year government service pin Dec. 19. Her 30-year anniversary date was Dec. 2.

Fender has been stationed at Dyess since 1998. And, as with all her past assignments, she enjoys her time here at Abilene and with the 7th CES.

"I love my job in the resources flight," Fender said. "CE is a wonderful group of professionals."

Fender is also an active member of several Abilene groups including the Chamber of Commerce, Military Affairs Committee, Abilene Women's Club and the Altrusa International Women's Club of Abilene.

She also owns a bed and breakfast in downtown Abilene.

"I like to find lots of activities to occupy my time," Fender said. "I've always been this way and I don't plan to change anytime soon. Retirement isn't in my plans for a long time."

Tenure

"This policy change gives the Air Force the flexibility to keep our experienced people longer. It's the right thing for the Air Force since we are a retention-based force," said Maj. Gen. John Speigel, who is in charge of personnel policy at the Air Staff. "It should help us alleviate increased stress on some of our career fields and, at the same time, relieve some recruiting and training requirements."

"We have a pretty comprehensive set of instructions, but each case may be a little different. We understand that," Hall said. "It's best for everyone to be sure they understand how these changes will affect them personally."

For instance, the system will not automatically set a person's retirement date based on the high year of tenure," he said. "And although members' HYT dates will be extended, that will not automatically extend their projected dates of separation."

The last revision of HYT dates was in 2001, according to officials. At that time maximum years of service for technical sergeants was increased from 20 to 22 years.

Policies associated with years of service and high year of tenure will continue to be reviewed periodically to ensure they are meeting the needs of the Air Force and Air Force people, officials said.

7th LRS 'comeback kids' down Cops 14-6 to capture base title

By Master Sgt. Bill Lincicome
Dyess Public Affairs

Some football coaches yell to be heard over the deafening roar of a stadium full of fans while others holler at their players for emphasis or motivation. At the beginning of the intramural flag football season in October, Mike Bland subscribed to the latter philosophy. Bland, who pulled double duty as the 7th Logistics Readiness Squadron quarterback and coach, spent a good amount of time hollering to motivate his team which managed just one touchdown in its first two games. Two and a half months later, Bland was still screaming -- but for a different reason.

"I've got just one comment -- y'all are some non-touchdown catchin' mothas," Bland yelled as his crew loudly celebrated a 14-6 victory over the 7th Security Forces Squadron to win the base flag football championship, Dec. 20.

Bland's comment was directed at John "J-Dub" Hearn and Tony Player who dropped sure touchdown catches in the first half of the championship game. But both receivers later atoned for their gaffes as Player hauled in a 32-yard touchdown catch and Hearn returned a punt 20 yards to set up another score.

Bland said winning the championship capped a remarkable turnaround for a team which struggled early in the season. "It took a while to get a cohesive unit like ours," he said. "We had a hard time at the beginning because of guys going to school and deployments, and because of the weather. But we managed to get everybody back during the playoffs and that made the difference."

The coach said the addition of players like receiver Hector Gonzalez and defensive end Byung Kang pushed his team to a higher level. Both 7th LRS and 7th SFS, which already had one loss in the double-elimination tournament, were desperately seeking positive signs -- and positive yardage -- during the championship game. Neither squad could amass much offense until 7th LRS got on the board midway through the first half. Bland connected with Player for what appeared to be a short gain, but the receiver juiced his way around three defenders and sprinted into the end zone for a touchdown. Peter Adams caught the reception for the conversion that made it a 7-0 7th LRS lead.

The lawmen's defense held 7th LRS in check until late in the second half. Hearn returned a 7th SFS punt 20 yards to the 7th LRS 39-yard line. Bland then directed an 11-play scoring drive, including a clutch fourth-down catch by Gonzalez, capped by a 5-yard touchdown pass to quick-strike capabilities which propelled his team to the American League regular-season crown, Cops' quarterback Darrell Toney got his team moving on its next drive. After hitting receivers Dennis Lopez and Walter Watkins for long gains, Toney handed off to Damien Hawkins who sprinted 41 yards to the end zone. The conversion attempt failed, but the Cops had cut the lead to eight points with 1:14 remaining.

Bland tried to run out the clock on 7th LRS' next possession, however, his team was forced to turn the ball over to the lawmen in the final seconds of the game. But 7th LRS' Joe Macias intercepted Toney's desperation pass on the last play of the game to seal the win.

After the hitting and hollering were done, Leonard Gunner, 7th SFS coach, had nothing but praise for both teams.

"I can't take anything away from (7th LRS) -- they're a hell of a team," Gunner said. "We have about a third of our team gone, but we can't make excuses. We knew we'd have to beat them twice (to win the championship). We made a great effort to get past these guys to get to the second game, but we couldn't get there. The best team won today."

Despite beating 7th SFS in the regular season and earlier in the playoffs, 7th LRS knew the Cops wouldn't be a pushover in the title game. "They put up a challenge, but they were tired and we were hungry," Bland said.

Kang agreed. "This is as good as any Christmas present," he said. "But this wasn't given to us -- we earned it."

Opening night yields 7th AMXS win

The 7th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron team no. 2 ran away with a tough win as they beat the 317th Airlift Group-Operations Support Squadron 35-26 Tuesday at the base fitness center.

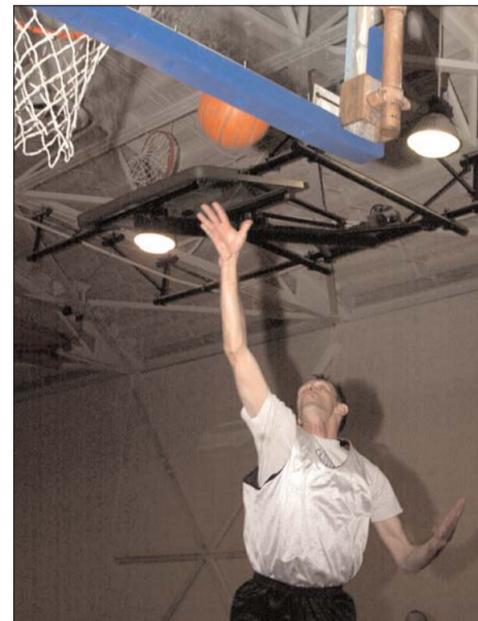

Despite the close score, the victory was good enough for Maintainer player/coach Eric Watson. "It wasn't a pretty win but we got the 'W' and that's all that matters," Watson said. "We came out real slow, but started to find our rhythm in the second half."

The game opened with both teams struggling to reach double digits on the scoreboard until the Airlifters started pulling away late in the first half. Airlifter forward Ed Redpath made several clutch shots to start a small run as time wound down. The run put the Airlifters up 16-8. Redpath was the first half's leading scorer with 6 points.

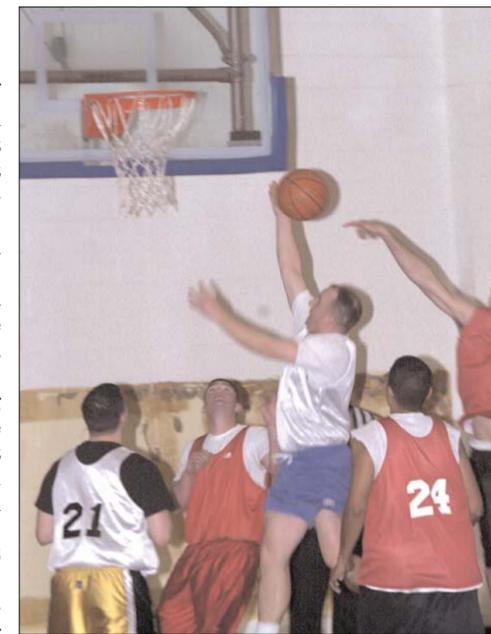

The Airlifters entered the second half confident in their defense and hard-nosed playing style, but then came the meltdown.

Determined not to be discouraged by the low first half score, the Maintainers opened the second half in a furious fashion. Plentiful shot opportunities through much of the second half was opened up by the Maintainers' dominance of the offensive and defensive glass.

317th Airlift Group-Operations Support Squadron guard/coach Wade Parks drives to the hole in his team's 35-26 loss to the 7th AMXS no. 2 during intramural basketball Tuesday at the base fitness center.

Willie Black began to take the game into their own hands, as Rivers contributed 12 points to eventually tie scoring leader Redpath, and Black added 10. Watson supported his team by adding a solid 6 with several rebounds.

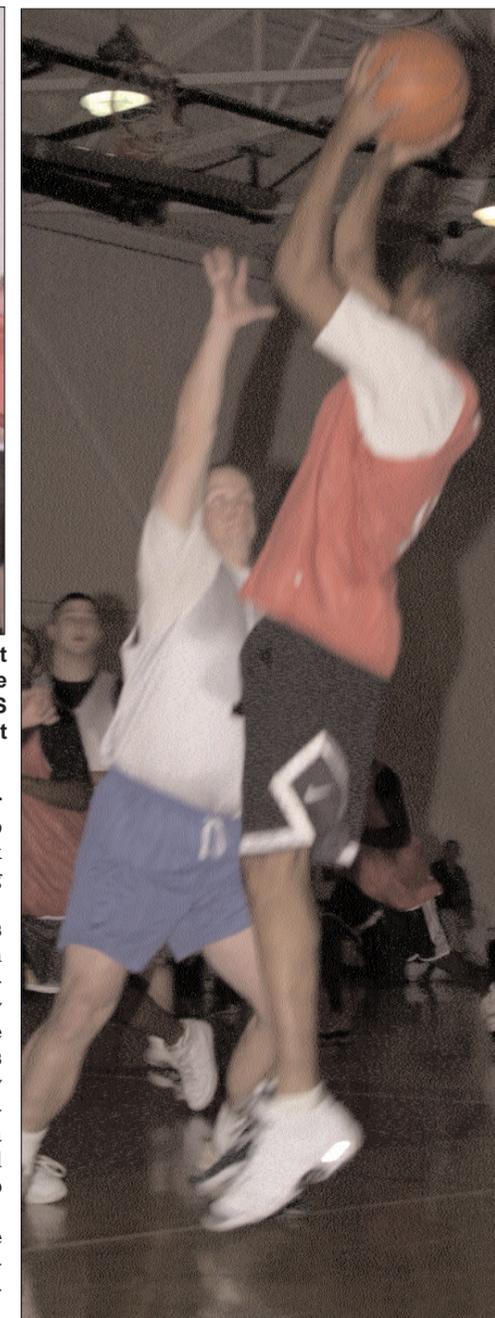

The aggressive rebounding of the Maintainers wore down the Airlifters, who were playing with a short bench. The Airlifters attempted to counter the sudden change in momentum, but they could not get past the Maintainers' aggressive defense. A combination of forced shots, turnovers and their dominance on the boards led to many fastbreak opportunities for the Maintainers, creating a 13-2 run. The Airlifters had not scored a single basket in the second half since forward Michael Black put in a 10-footer in the first two minutes.

When Rivers drained a 3-pointer to grab the largest lead of the ball game with the score 30-18 with 3 minutes left, the situation was beginning to look hopeless for the Airlifters.

Undeterred, Airlifter player/coach Wade Parks called timeout to rally his team.

The Airlifters tried to come back by going on a 12-point run, led by the shooting of Redpath and Parks, but once again the fatigue set in and the Maintainers were able to hold on to the win after Watson made a shot to push the final score to 35-26.

"We just ran out of gas," Parks said. "We had a good chance to win this ballgame after the first half but just didn't have the legs to finish it out. 7th AMXS team no. 2 did a great job of coming back so we just have to look ahead to our next game now."

Time runs out on Falcon comeback

SAN FRANCISCO -- Time ran out for the Air Force Academy Falcons on a third and goal at the 10-yard line during the San Francisco Bowl on Dec. 31. The Falcons lost to Virginia Tech, 17-10.

The Falcons were behind with four minutes and 11 seconds left, and needed to drive 82 yards for a touchdown and extra point to extend the game into overtime. The Falcons crossed midfield on a series of runs, which ground away precious time.

"When you've got Air Force where you feel like they've got to throw, you think you've got them," said Virginia Tech head coach Frank Beamer. "But we didn't have them."

Falcon quarterback Chance Harridge connected with tight end Adam Strecker, moving the chains to the Hokies' 29-yard line. But an illegal block penalty on the next play pushed the Falcons back 10 yards for a second and 20, as time continued to tick away. The Hokies gave up only 9 yards on the next two plays, forcing fourth down.

With the game on the line, Harridge connected with wide receiver J.P. Waller at the 10-yard line. That gave the Falcons a first and goal at the 10. Two incomplete pass attempts left the Falcons with a third down and only seven seconds left.

After the snap, Harridge rolled right, looking for an option route between the tight end and halfback.

"My read guy kind of sat underneath, and they dropped a linebacker, so I didn't have a throwing lane," said Harridge. "Once the throwing lane had collapsed, it's throw the ball away and chance that time's not run off the clock with that play

-- because there's only seven seconds left in the ball game -- or just take off for the end zone. And I think I made the right decision in tucking the ball up and trying (for) a big play at the end."

Harridge had led the Falcons to a national rushing title and a number of big plays this season. But it was not to be on this play. He made it to the 3-yard line, where cornerback Ronyell Whitaker knocked the ball loose. Falcons left guard Brett Huyser recovered the ball and tried to advance it, but was tackled as time ran out.

The loss closed out the Falcons' 2002 season with an 8-5 record.

"Our football team is very disappointed," said Falcons head coach Fisher DeBerry. "I don't think we lost the football game, but I think that time ran out on us. And I bleed for our guys, because they gave a tremendous effort.

"But this is the second game that we have lost in a row on the last play of the game. That's something that we have got to address and work toward fixing."
