Food service team named best in ACC

By Airman 1st Class Lindsey Maurice
Dyess Public Affairs

The 7th Services Squadron food service team was named the 2003 Air Combat Command Service Excellence Award winner Oct. 28 for the third year in a row.

The food service team -- which consists of the Longhorn and Wings dining facilities, and the in-flight kitchen -- was recognized for its service for fiscal year 2002.

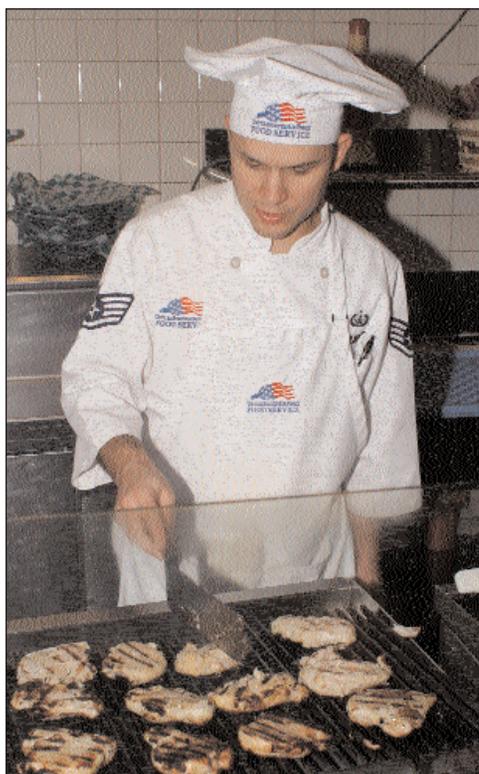

"We are honored and excited to have won this award again," said Chief Master Sgt. Ross Ryan, 7th SVS superintendent. "We faced some tough competition this year, but with the solid leadership of Master Sgt. Ernest Go and the hard work from the rest of the food service team, we were able to show the evaluators just how much the Dyess team deserves the award."

During a two-day ACC evaluation in September, the team looked at five main areas -- food quality, sanitation, customer service, contract management and readiness.

Although the Dyess food service team hasn't received official feedback yet from ACC about what their strong points are, Ryan is confident of his team's performance.

"I think our strongest points are our sanitation and food quality," Ryan said. "Our food service contractor is the best I've ever seen, and they continue to be outstanding. They keep (the dining facilities and the in-flight kitchen) spotless."

"Also our food quality has done nothing but improve," Ryan said. "Regardless of whether a meal is cooked by one of our contractors or by one of our (airmen), the quality is equally as good."

Airman Shawn Baldauf

Staff Sgt. Todd Grundy, 7th Services Squadron food service shift leader, prepares grilled chicken for lunch at the Longhorn Dining Facility. The Dyess food service team was named the 2003 Air Combat Command Service Excellence Award winner Oct. 28.

Ryan is also impressed with the attitudes of the food service team's newest airmen.

"We have a lot of new young airmen who are very enthusiastic and well qualified (in food services)," Ryan said. "I'm sure the evaluation team took their motivation into consideration as well."

Since last year's competition, Ryan said the Dyess food service team has been focusing on expanding their programs and being more responsive to customers.

One of the biggest customer complaints was the amount of time it took for customers to get through the cash register line at the Longhorn Dining Facility, Ryan said. In response to the complaints, 7th SVS bought another cash register and added another cashier to the contract.

"Now the line moves considerably faster at lunch time, and our customers seem very pleased," Ryan said.

"We're also in the process of expanding our 'Grab-n-Go' program, which we started to help the people who don't have a lot of time for lunch," Ryan said. "Instead of waiting through the food line, customers can quickly grab from a selection of pre-packaged meals and other items, such as chips and sodas, and check out at a register."

With the food service's 2003 ACC victory now under its belt, the team contends to defend its reign as best in the Air Force. The Air Force John L. Hennessy award evaluation team is scheduled to visit Dyess early next year.

"As the defending champion (of the Hennessy trophy), it's always harder to maintain that standard in a competition," said Lt. Col. Paul Myers, 7th SVS commander. "But, I'm confident we'll do well."

"(Our team is filled) with outstanding troops who serve the customer every day, not just at Dyess, but around the world. They are the heart and soul of our success. (We have a) working relationship with our contractor, outstanding customer service, great facilities, outstanding support from our sister squadrons, unmatched support from wing leadership and just good food. We know what it takes to win."

Veterans' Day: Honoring those who served

By Capt Keith Holmes
7th Logistics Repair
Squadron

At 11 a.m. Saturday, we will remember the fallen and honor the living veterans who faithfully served our country in our local Veterans Day Parade in downtown Abilene.

Brig. Gen. Wendell Griffin, 7th Bomb Wing commander, will review over 300 Dyess members and 16 base vehicles among the nearly 100 entries from military and local organizations in the event. The parade is sponsored by the Abilene Veterans Services Organization.

Veterans Day first began as "Armistice Day" after Congressional resolution in 1926. Twelve years later, it became a national holiday to remember our fallen military members who served in World War I. A few years later, war broke out in Europe again. About 16.5 million Americans served during World War II. 407,000 of them died in service, including 292,000 battle deaths.

In 1954, President Eisenhower signed a bill proclaiming Nov. 11 as Veterans Day. The day represents the date World War I ended -- the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month in 1918.

Additionally, this proclamation recognized all veterans from all wars fought by Americans. Since Armistice Day in 1918, we have seen numerous wars and conflicts, in which our military members have faithfully served.

This is a day we typically think of paying respect to our fathers and grandfathers who served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam. It's important to remember there are many veterans currently serving on active duty and many who provided support to those combat veterans. Some of the conflicts of our time were Desert Storm, Bosnia and Kosovo, and Afghanistan, just to name a few.

Spectators may watch from anywhere along the parade route.

Big thanks

Comment: I would like to thank Staff Sgt. Teresa Frank for teaching aerobics at the Health and Wellness Center. She does this for free and takes time out of her day to teach the class. She does a wonderful job.

Response: Thank you for the great comment. Without volunteers like Sergeant Frank, the HAWC would not be able to offer the excellent programs it does. Also, the HAWC is always looking for good volunteers willing to take some time to help expand the aerobics program. Whether it be to volunteer at the HAWC or to work out, come in and participate in the great aerobics programs offered here on base.

Commander's Corner

Dyess Warriors.... This weekend, we celebrate Veterans Day. This is a day for all veterans – those who have served and those who are serving. It is our time to thank those who have sacrificed, and given their dedication and courage to give us the continued freedom and opportunity to live in this great land. It is our time to honor those who gave their lives while defending those freedoms, and those who served with valor and lived. It is also our time to thank those still serving today around the world. Men and women who are standing watch on foreign soil – like those currently deployed from Dyess -- who continue our fight in the war on terrorism.

They're alert.... They're vigilant.... And they're prepared to conduct the mission.

Americans have always bore any hardship, overcome any obstacle, and conquer any foe in the pursuit of liberty and justice... and we continue to do so today.

We are stronger than a year ago, and more courageous in our endeavors. We appreciate life, and those who serve our country for a greater cause.

President Bush said, "America is leading the civilized world in a titanic struggle against terror. Freedom and fear are at war... and freedom is winning!"

It is important to remember we are winning not because of our B-1s or C-130s. We are winning because of the men and women who proudly serve. As I walk around the base, I am continually impressed with the high caliber of people here.

Take time to give thanks for this great nation... thanks for the 40 million American veterans... thanks for the half-million Americans who have died while serving... and thanks for the people serving today to keep America safe for future generations.

God bless our veterans, past and present, and God bless America.

Veterans Day message from SECAF, CSAF

By James Roche

Secretary of the Air Force and

Gen. John Jumper

Air Force Chief of Staff

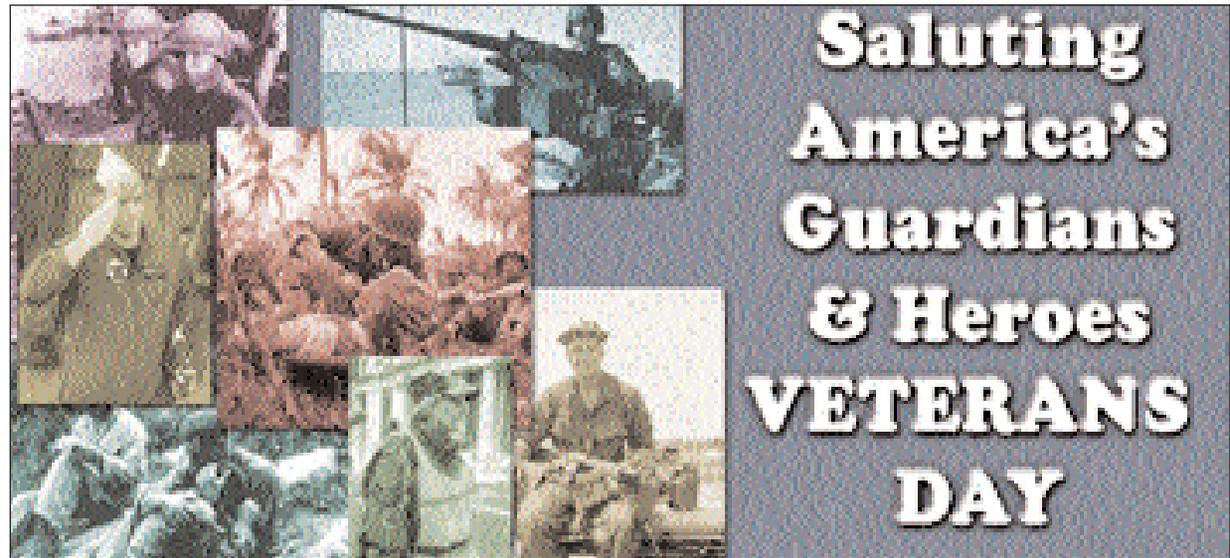

Some 84 years ago, on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, an armistice was announced that silenced the guns of what was known throughout the world as the "Great War".

A war-weary American private described his unit's observance in a letter home: "We stood up and didn't say a word. It felt as if I had dropped my pack after a long hike and straightened out my back; I was twice as light as any bird. But all we did was stand and stare and stare. I stood up and stared, and never said a word."

Sadly, World War I was not the war to end all wars, and the Armistice Day of that era is known as Veterans Day, in salute of all those who have served, fought and died for their country in the years since.

"On Veterans Day we pause to reflect on those who, like that young private, have given so much to our nation. Through sacrifice, dedication and courage, they gave each of us the gift of freedom.

It is also a time to recognize the men and women who continue to serve in America's armed forces today around the world. Men and women who are standing watch on foreign soil, bringing food and medical supplies to people in distress, serving as peacekeepers in strife-filled areas of the world, or fighting our war on terrorism. If history has taught us anything, it is that Americans will bear any hardship, overcome any obstacle and conquer any foe in their pursuit of liberty and justice -- for themselves, their children, their countrymen and for those whose faces they'll never see.

Today we are a different nation -- challenged, yet stronger; less sheltered, yet more courageous; more appreciative of life; and, for those who serve our country, even more willing to risk our life for a greater cause.

To have worn our nation's uniform -- America is better for your service. Words fail to adequately express your contribution to our nation.

To each of you, our military men and women who we honor today -- whose dedication and loyalty are the strength of our military and exemplify the spirit, courage and patriotism that makes America great -- we proudly salute you."

We are free because of the heroic efforts of veterans

By Gen. Hal Hornburg

Commander, Air Combat Command

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. -- From the birth of our great nation in the 18th century to the present war against terrorism, America's sons and daughters have been called upon to defend our freedom.

They have shown exceptional courage and sacrifice, providing us with the warm cloak of liberty we proudly wear today.

On Nov. 11, we observe Veterans Day and honor generations of men and women in uniform who have put themselves in harm's way to deter aggression, uphold democracy and defend freedom. The sacrifices of these heroes have held back the dark shadow of tyranny and have protected a way of life few nations will ever know.

Veterans Day was originally observed in 1918 as Armistice Day in recognition of the end of World War I; signed on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month. Since then, our great nation has paid a heavy price for freedom.

Marines, airmen, soldiers, sailors and coast guardsmen have been called upon to fight for our ideals, and many have made the ultimate sacrifice in distant places like Europe, Korea, Vietnam, Panama, Southwest Asia, the Balkans, Africa and Afghanistan.

Those who have fought bravely to preserve the ideals of freedom and democracy have left a proud legacy for generations to come. Our veterans personify our Air Force core values of integrity, service and excellence.

Their contributions to our country deserve to be recognized and appreciated.

On Veterans Day, I encourage you to honor those who have come before us and to appreciate the sacrifices they have made in defense of this great nation.

To all veterans, past and present, I salute you and thank you for protecting the freedoms we enjoy. I am proud to serve with you.

Air Force selects newest chiefs

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas -- The Air Force recently selected 561 senior master sergeants, including two from Fort Hood, Texas, for promotion to the service's highest enlisted rank as part of the 02E9 promotion board.

The Air Force released the promotion list Wednesday. The complete list of selectees will be posted to the Air Force Personnel Center's Web page Tuesday.

The Fort Hood selectees for chief master sergeant are:

Barry Ortner, 3rd Weather Squadron

Brian Brock, 9th Air Support Operations Squadron

The board, which considered 2,815 senior master sergeants, selected 19.93 percent -- 6.93 percent above the minimum promotion rate objective of 13 percent. Last year's selection rate to chief master sergeant was 22.06 percent.

The average score for those selected was 658.28, with an average time in grade and time in service of 3.54 and 22.14 years, respectively. The average score was based on the following point averages:

- 135 for enlisted performance reports;
- 28.24 for time in grade;
- 22.98 for time in service;
- 23.37 for decorations;
- 69.25 for U.S. Air Force Supervisory Examination; and
- 379.44 for board score.

The Chief Master Sergeant Evaluation Board convened Oct. 15 to evaluate individual records of senior master sergeants eligible for promotion.

Open Season!

Civilian employees can review, update health plans from Monday to Dec. 9

By 1st Lt. Brandon Lingle

Air Force Personnel Center
Public Affairs

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas -- Air Force civilian employees will have the opportunity to review and update their health care plan during the Federal Employees Health Benefits program open season Monday to Dec. 9.

Program changes could affect more than 7,000 employees since 11 health plan carriers are dropping out of the FEHB and many others are drastically changing their services in 2003, said Janet Thomas, a member of the benefits and entitlements service team, or BEST team, at the Air Force Personnel center.

Carriers will still offer 188 enrollment choices.

"Even though insurance carriers leaving the FEHB or making significant service changes are required to notify their customers, we send letters to those affected too," said Thomas, "but it is still the employee's responsibility to ensure (his or her) plan is in order.

"Open season is the best time for people to review their health care coverage. Not only to make desired changes, but to ensure their plan hasn't been altered or discontinued."

"Open season is the best time for people to review their health care coverage -- not only to make desired changes, but to ensure their plan hasn't been altered or discontinued."

FEHB premiums are expected to increase an average of 11 percent in January. Health maintenance organizations will increase an average of 13.6 percent and fee-for-service plans will increase 10.5 percent, Thomas said. Studies show health care premiums nationally will climb as much as 20 percent in 2003, according to officials of the office of personnel management.

Employees with "self-only" coverage will pay about $4.45 more and those with family coverage will pay about $10.21 more per pay period, Thomas said. The government will continue to pay an average of 72 percent of FEHB premiums.

OPM officials attribute these premium increases to the health care providers' rising costs, advances in medical technology, and an aging population, said Thomas.

More FEHB information including guides, rates and plan descriptions are available on the OPM Web site, or the BEST home page.

All Air Force-serviced civilian employees must make their open season changes by one of two methods:

- AFPC's Employee Benefits Information System Web site.

Employees with an existing plan can use the BEST Web automated system to make their elections and avoid having to transfer to a counselor to complete their transaction.

- The BEST automated phone system at (800) 997-2378, or 527-2378 if calling within San Antonio. Hearing impaired employees may call the TDD line at (800) 382-0893, or 565-2276 within San Antonio.

Counselors are available weekdays, 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. CST.

New career status bonus program option available

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas -- Airmen eligible to opt for a $30,000 lump-sum bonus upon reaching 15 years of service now have the option to receive the money in annual installments, potentially decreasing their tax liability.

The Career Status Bonus program, which began in April 2001, gave eligible servicemembers a choice to take the "bonus" in addition to their retirement instead of choosing the current "high three" retirement plan. The "high three" retirement program pays retirees 50 percent of their highest three pay years after 20 years of service.

"Congress wanted to give servicemembers a more lucrative option to receive their CSB payment," said Staff Sgt. Althea Bard, CSB program manager.

People who received their CSB bonus payments on or after Dec. 28, and those who have yet to make their decision may now elect from the following options:

- One payment of $30,000
- Two annual installments of $15,000 each
- Three annual installments of $10,000 each
- Four annual installments of $7,500 each

"Congress wanted to give servicemembers a more lucrative option to receive their (career status bonus) payment."

Staff Sgt. Althea Bard
CBS program manager

- Five annual installments of $6,000 each.

Each choice includes the 40 percent "Redux" retirement. Those who decline are automatically entered under the "high three" retirement program.

"A potential decrease to the amount a member is taxed and greater participation in the Thrift Savings Plan are advantages to taking the installments," said Master Sgt. Mike Hall, superintendent of the Air Force Personnel Center's requirements branch. "People will receive their CSB payments each year in January."

Local military personnel flight officials will notify people who received payment after Dec. 28 of their eligibility. Those who switch to one of the installment options will be required to repay all but the first installment, and then begin drawing one of the annual installment options. The deadline to switch to a payment plan is Nov. 15.

Officials will also contact people who were previously notified of their CSB eligibility and declined participation to afford them the opportunity to take part in the installment options.

"(Servicemembers) should take their time and weigh their options carefully though," Hall said. "People must do their homework. It's a decision only they can make."

Installation family support center financial management counselors can provide investment-type information to interested members, officials said. People should work through their personnel flight to confirm eligibility, said AFPC officials.

For more information, people can contact the 7th Mission Support Squadron military personnel flight career enhancement section at 6-2901, or call the Air Force Contact Center at DSN 665-5000 or toll free at (866) 229-7074.

Air Force chooses new airframe

by Staff Sgt. A.J. Bosker
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON -- The Air Force currently enjoys a command and control advantage on the battlefield thanks to its E-3 Sentry airborne warning and control system aircraft and E-8C Joint Surveillance Target Attack Radar System aircraft.

However, as future success increasingly depends upon an ability to rapidly engage fleeting or emerging targets and to counter the enemy's growing technological developments, the service is developing the next generation system -- the multi-sensor command and control aircraft -- to maintain its decisive advantage on the battlefield.

The service envisions moving the air and ground surveillance, battle management, command and control, and targeting capabilities of the AWACS and Joint STARS on to the same or separate Boeing 767 MC2A aircraft, Air Force officials at the Pentagon said.

The Air Force Command and Control, Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance Center at Langley Air Force Base, Va., analyzed a variety of aircraft from different manufacturers before deciding upon one that met all desired requirements.

"In the end, (they) determined that the only aircraft with the power, space, range and load-carrying capability to meet the requirements of the MC2A was Boeing's 767-400 extended-range aircraft," said Lt. Col. Tracy Tynan, chief of the Air Force's command, control, communications and computers, intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance future capabilities division at the Pentagon.

Once the Air Force select-

U.S. Air Force art

An artist's rendition of the next generation command and control aircraft, the MC2A.

ed the aircraft that would become the MC2A, the service chose to take a spiral development approach in the acquisition of the airplane, said Bobby Smart, deputy director of the Air Force acquisition directorate's information dominance programs at the Pentagon.

"The goal of spiral development is to get a capability to the war fighter as quickly as we can," Smart said. "We chose a spiral development approach because in the past, it's taken too long to deliver a complete capability to the field."

That method is preferred to the alternative of waiting years down the road for a more complete package, he added.

"Rather than trying to solve the whole challenge of putting both the ground and air capability on one platform, which would take us a few years to work through before we could begin the acquisition process, we instead are opting to field these capabilities in increments as current technology permits," he said.

"This will enable us to field one test bed aircraft in 2008 and four operational aircraft by 2012," Smart said. "These four MC2As will augment the Joint STARS fleet, giving us (an additional 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week orbit) ground moving target indication capability and enhancing our ability to detect cruise missiles."

The MC2A test bed's mission is just as important to the overall program's success, but the requirement for a test bed has raised some confusion, Smart said.

"People have asked why we need a test bed when we have the Paul Revere aircraft, a Boeing 707, that has been used in joint forces exercises to evaluate battle management command, control and communications processes and procedures," Smart said. "Simply put, the radar that we're going to put on the MC2A platform physically won't fit on the Paul Revere aircraft. The command and control experimentation that we've done with Paul Revere has been and continues to be of great value, but it's just one piece of the overall program."

MC2A will be horizontally integrated with current and future Air Force systems and have the battle management and command and control capability to serve as an airborne air and space operations center, he said.

Staying Drug Free

Dyess helps educate students at Dyess elementary school

By Tonya Williams
Dyess Public Affairs

"I know to say 'No' in the morning, I know to say 'No' after school, I know to say 'No' in the evening. To stay drug free, that is my rule. Drug free, drug free, I'll stay drug free all of my life. That's right."

The song was coming from the Dyess Elementary School gym Oct. 30, as 300 students were singing at the top of their lungs to celebrate Red Ribbon Week.

As part of the week-long observation, the school received a visit from some of Dyess' life skills professionals who came to speak about the dangers of drugs and how to stay drug-free.

Lt. Col. Marlin Moore, manager of the Dyess Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Treatment Program, talked to the kids about how Red Ribbon Week came about and why everyone should stay drug free.

Moore used an analogy about how a branch may one day become a tree if it takes care of itself and stays on the right track.

"If the tree is really lucky, it can be used to build an airplane and then have the ability to soar to new heights. But, the only way that can happen is if the branch stays drug free," Moore said. "We all start off made out of the same raw materials, but what happens to us in our life determines how we turn out."

Moore also told the kids about how 15,000 people were killed last year from drug related incidents. "All those deaths are unnecessary and didn't have to happen," Moore said.

Moore, also the senior psychologist for the base's life skills clinic, let the students know Red Ribbon Week started as a way to honor U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officer Enrique "Kiki" Camarena in 1986.

Camarena

Enrique "Kiki"

Camarena in 1986.

Camarena was sent to work undercover in Mexico investigating a major drug cartel. On Feb. 7, 1985, Camarena left his office for lunch and was shoved into a car by five men. One month later, Camarena's body was found in a shallow grave. He had been tortured to death.

In honor of Camarena's memory and his battle against illegal drugs, friends began to wear red badges of satin. Parents began to form coalitions in efforts to battle drug use.

From those coalitions came the National Family Partnership. They organized the first nationwide Red Ribbon Campaign in 1988.

Since then the campaign has reached millions of children.

"I don't think I have ever seen the children get so involved," said Mary Thomas, counselor at Dyess Elementary. "The support we have received from Dyess was much more than we expected. We were given the children a little souvenir with a theme every day of the week. One example was when we gave out footballs one day for the theme, 'Don't throw your life away.'"

"We hope next year will be just as successful."

DeCA scholarship contest

The Defense Commissary Agency's 2003 scholarships for military children program has begun.

This year's essay topic is how being the child of a military servicemember has influenced your educational goals.

Participants must be unmarried children under the age of 23 of active duty, Reserve, Guard or retired military people. Eligibility will be determined using the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System database. Applicants should ensure they, as well as their sponsor, are enrolled in the DEERS database and that they have a current military ID card. All applicants must also be U.S. citizens.

Applications for the 2003 program can be downloaded from <http://www.commissaries.com> or <http://www.fisherhouse.org>. They can also be picked up at the base commissary. There is a two-page instruction sheet to make the process easier.

The deadline for returning applications by hand or mail is Feb. 21, 2003.

For more information, call the base commissary at 6-4802.

Speakers' bureau

The Dyess Public Affairs Speakers' Bureau is looking for volunteers to speak at public events. Engagements include speaking at clubs and schools about a variety of Air Force topics.

Harvest Share/Warm Heart drives begin

Dyess Public Affairs

Dyess people can help make the upcoming holiday season a bit brighter for fellow military members and their families.

The Dyess First Sergeants Council is sponsoring the Harvest Share/Warm Heart program throughout the months of November and December. During this annual fundraising campaign, people can contribute money at booths staffed by volunteers outside the base exchange and commissary.

Contributions raised by this program provide vouchers for military families to help offset the expense of Thanksgiving and Christmas meals at the commissary, and also support numerous on- and off-base charities such as the Ben Richey Boys Ranch. Money raised also helps support the Cookie Bus during base operational readiness exercises and the Dyess Food Bank.

"Whether it is in community involvement or just freely giving to charities, Dyess has always been a standout," said Master Sgt. Rich

Cornelius, who's heading up this year's drive, said Dyess first sergeants distributed approximately 600 vouchers totaling $11,500 to Dyess members last year. "Whether you give a dollar or a nickel, it's all appreciated," Cornelius said.

Commanders and supervisors can identify families to their unit first sergeants today through December. For more information or to volunteer to staff a booth, call Cornelius at 6-2962.

New dormitory standard means bigger rooms for airmen

By Senior Airman
Sara Banda
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON -- Air Force officials have developed a new dormitory standard designed to enhance the standard of living for residents of Air Force dormitories worldwide.

Construction on the four-plus-one style of dormitory could begin as early as this year. This style has four airmen sharing a common living area, complete with a kitchen and living room, but having their own bedroom and bathroom.

Under the current one-plus-one plan, two airmen share a kitchenette and bathroom, but have their own bedroom.

Dyess officials said there are no immediate plans to convert any dorms here to the four-plus-one standard. Many have already been converted to the one-plus-one style. When the remainder of the dorms will be converted has not yet been determined.

The new plan is a direct

Dyess dorms, like many others in the Air Force, have already been converted to the one-plus-one standard. Four-plus-one, a new standard, will further the quality of life of airmen in the future at some bases.

result of a recent policy change by the secretary of defense that increases the allowable space for dorm rooms to 17 square meters, said Col. James Holland, Air Force housing division chief. He added that the new dimensions, which constitute an increase in size of nearly 50 percent from the 11 square meters authorized under the one-plus-one plan, were authorized with certain stipulations on cost and overall building size.

"The secretary of defense authorized us to increase the size of private living space in the dormitory and provide private bathrooms, as long as we do it for the same cost of the existing dormitories," he said.

The new plan sends a clear message of support to enlisted men and women worldwide, said Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force Gerald Murray.

"The four-plus-one is a great initiative that improves on the one-plus-one design," said the chief. "It will give our airmen more space and a better layout."

Eight bases have agreed to go ahead with the four-plus-one plan in 2003's construction budget: Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, Ariz.; Hurlburt Field, Fla.; Barksdale AFB, La.; Nellis AFB, Nev.; Pope AFB, N.C.; Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio; Sheppard AFB, Texas; and Osan Air Base, South Korea.

The already built one-plus-one dormitories will not be renovated, as they are deemed adequate by the secretary of defense policy, said Kathryn Halvorson, Air Force housing division deputy chief. Both plans, she said, offer considerable upgrades to previous dormitory standards.

"The one-plus-one room was good because it was a private room, but it was small," she said. "We think it's a win-win (situation) because the airman living in dorms now will get larger rooms."

Murray agreed, adding that the change is the latest in a series of quality-of-life improvements for airmen everywhere.

"The new plan takes us further in the continuous journey of enhancing quality of life for our airmen," he said.

Bull Run one week away

By Master Sgt. Bill Lincome
Dyess Public Affairs

Runners and walkers only have one week left to register and raise money for the 23rd Top 3 Bull Run.

The 4-mile walk/run for charity starts at 10 a.m. Nov. 15 at the base picnic grounds. People can preregister through their unit representative (see sidebar) or at 8 a.m. the day of the race.

The semi-annual event, hosted by the Team Dyess Top 3 Association, benefits several Abilene charities as well as the Airman Leadership School, the Community College of the Air Force and the annual enlisted dining out, said Senior Master Sgt. Mike Murphy, Bull Run coordinator.

The event is open to all military members, civilian government employees and family members, Murphy said. "All that is required is a minimum of $20 for a registration fee that participants can raise through pledges or pay themselves," he said. People who register by today with at least $20 in donations will receive a Bull Run T-shirt the morning of the event.

The Bull Run scoring system is weighted by several factors, including the individual's time, category (walk or run), age, gender and the amount of money raised. Winners will be recognized in the walking and running categories.

In addition to dozens of plaques and certificates awarded to the top finishers in several categories, Murphy said the person raising the most money will win a one-night stay in a plush Dallas hotel. Participants can also win one of the dozens of door prizes including gift certificates and giveaways from on- and off-base merchants including the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, the Mall of Abilene, Dyess Health And Wellness Center, Texas Roadhouse and World Gym.

"While there are some nice prizes people can win this year, it comes down to the fact that the main goal is to raise the money for some good causes," Murphy said. The June 15 Bull Run, held on the base flightline, raised nearly $4,000.

Other community organizations benefiting from the event will be the Ben Richey Boys Ranch and The Abilene NOAH project.

Cattilac Style, Craft Design, Ab-Tex Beverage Corporation, Sam's Club, Albertson's Food Center, Academy Sports, Big 5 Sports, CiCi's Pizza, Furr's Family Dining, Pep Boys and Skinny's Convenience Stores are also sponsoring the event.

(Senior Airman Zachary Wilson, Dyess Public Affairs, contributed to this report.)
